

Accessing forestry – information on the move

Donal Whelan

More and more people now access information while away from the office on their mobile phones, tablets and laptops. The demand for responsive content at a faster speed has necessitated the complete re-design of the website www.forestry.ie in recent months. This portal for the Irish forest industry contains information on a range of forestry topics which are accessible through multiple navigation options and search facilities on the site.

Whether you are looking for information on biomass, thinning and felling, industry statistics, the latest forestry apps or tools, or contact details of any of the businesses listed in the Online directory, you can now find it even faster.

www.forestry.ie is regarded as a main reference source for the recently published Infographic on ESSENTIAL FORESTRY APPS.

Some of the best international forestry apps for your forestry and timber business are listed on <http://www.forestry.ie/information-links/tools-gadgets>

For the past number of years an online version of the ITGA Forestry & Timber Yearbook Directory has been hosted on the FORESTRY.IE website.

A complete new and improved Online directory has now been added. This Online directory is now mobile friendly and features all directory listings in the current Forestry & Timber Yearbook, so you will be able to access all directory information on the go.

The Online directory has full search capability. Users can search for a business or service by name, category, county, town or country. Directory listings contain a location map and, where applicable, links to company website and social media accounts. The Online directory is also accessible from www.itga.ie and www.forestryyearbook.ie.

All listings in this Forestry & Timber Yearbook are entered in the new online directory and full and half page advertisers in the Yearbook are entered as 'Featured listings'. All Featured listings have their Yearbook advertisement displayed in the Gallery at the end of their listing.
