Whether you are looking for information on forest management, thinning or felling, timber markets, industry statistics, pests & diseases, invasive species or certification, you can find it on FORESTRY.IE. Some of the best international forestry apps for the forestry and timber business are listed on <http://www.forestry.ie/information-links/tools-gadgets>.

FORESTRY.IE also hosts an online version of the Forestry & Timber Yearbook Directory, allowing growers and the sector to access directory contacts and information from their mobile phone while out and about.

The full year calendar of industry events listed in this yearbook is also incorporated and hosted on the website. There are a significant number of forestry and timber events planned over the coming year, so check out the regularly updated Calendar page on FORESTRY.IE where you will find highlighted entries each month to forestry related events both at home and abroad.

In November 2020, PEFC Ireland will host the International PEFC General Assembly and Certification Week. This international gathering has become one of the most significant events of its type worldwide and further information on this and other events will be updated regularly on FORESTRY.IE
